

Oliver Platt Returns to CRMS

It was with great pleasure that Colorado Rocky Mountain School welcomed back one of its most famous alumni, Oliver Platt (CRMS class of 1978). Platt, renowned for his starring roles in movies, television and theater over the past two decades, made a long-awaited return to the CRMS campus this past Saturday evening for the school's Family Weekend. In what was a surprise visit for most of the 400-plus in attendance, Platt passionately described his experience at CRMS below:

“You know, CRMS didn’t just save my life; my time at Rocky Mountain compelled me basically to consider everything I know about anything. My mind caught fire here. The engine by which I would eventually become myself roared to life here. I was taught to look beyond the obvious and then beyond that here. I became comfortable asking uncomfortable questions here. My intent for the authenticity I cherish got wired here. My absolutely invaluable appreciation for the group and the beauty of collaboration was found here. My respect for the natural world I gained here. I learned about community here and most important of all my respect for different perspectives was instilled in me by the extraordinary adults who taught me. What was extraordinary was a lot of them had deeply held beliefs...yet they all loved each other and treated each other with a lot of respect. I became a triple five-star product of Colorado Rocky Mountain School, a Rocky Mountain Oyster. I’m just so terribly happy to come back here and celebrate with you.”
